The Homestead

Swiss-born Simon Schneitter first farmed the rocky fields that surround the present-day Homestead. The mineral springs that caused him difficulty in farming began to draw friends and neighbors over for a refreshing swim. Word spread quickly and before long, people came from all around to relax in the warm water.

Swimming created hearty appetites and Simon's wife, Fanny, provided heaping plates of fried chicen for the hungry guets. It wasn't long before people came just for the great food.

Soon Simon forgot about farming and turned his homestead into a resort called "Schneitter's Hot Pots." He added a dining room, bath houses, guest rooms for overnight visitors, and successfully made the most out of a good thing.

Today the farm is called The Homestead. This 104-year-old resort nestled beneath the cottonwoods in Midway offers you a choice of 92 individually appointed cottage rooms and suites located in 14 unique buildings. Choose from the early Victorian lace and charm of the Virginia House or the rustic and spacious rooms of The Barn, which offer plenty of room for the entire family.

At The Homestead, Utah's AAA Four Diamond Resort, you'll discover year-round activities for all. Try breaking par on the new 18-hole championship golf course, challenge a friend to a brisk morning tennis match, saddle up at The Hitching Post Stables for a two-hour trail ride into the Wasatch Mountains, or pedal the quiet country lanes of Heber. After sampling The Homestead's "Americana" cuisine in the fine dining room or the fare in the new Grill Room, take a splash in their indoor or outdoor pool. Or just soak a while in the spring-fed hot mineral bath. In the winter, cuddle someone special on a romantic sleigh ride beneath a star-lit sky, take a snowmobile ride, or go cross-country skiing.

If you would like to visit with a group, or your family, or perhaps you're looking for a private, romantic hideaway to share with your special loved one, The Homestead will surpass your expectations and delight your senses with it's country atmosphere and friendly people. You'll be assured fond memories of your visit for many years to come.

Wasatch Mountain State Park

Wasatch Mountain State Park is 22,000 acres, 700 of which are developed for recreational purposes, located north of Midway on the east slope of the Wasatch Mountains. Situated at an elevation of 6,000 feet, the park has a moderate spring, summer, and fall climate and provides all-seasons recreation.

A unique feature of Wasatch Mountain State Park is it's 27 hole golf course that winds through quiet meadows at the foot of the mountains. The course, which features spacious greens kept in top shape by crisp mornings, both open and wooded roughs and a variety of bunkers, traps, and water hazards, is a golfer's challenge and delight.

Made-to-order for the young fisherman (12 and under) is a two acre children's fishing pond abundantly planted with trout for easy "hooking."

Located amidst oaks, cottonwoods, firs, and aspens, the Pine Creek Campground, having 135 camping sites with utility hookups and modern restroom and shower facilities, will suit all camping needs.

To entice any naturalist, camper, or visiting sightseer Wasatch Mountain State Park abounds in flora and fauna, a wide variety of birds, waterfowl, small mammals, and upland game.

At Wasatch Mountain State Park, the array of activities allows you to work out an itinerary to hit any mood.

For the more adventurous, the trail system inside the park can allow you to "get away from it all," in no time at all. Trails weave in and out among the Wasatch Mountains, and go through a variety of landscapes.

The State Park also hosts classical guitar concerts each Saturday in August; dog sled racing in the winter, and a mountainman rendezvous each summer.

Other summer activities include hiking, horseback riding, and picnicing. Winter activities include snowmobiling and cross-country skiing with rentals and tour guides available for both.

Mountainman Rendezvous — Gathering of competitors for games in old style survival techniques, July 12-15 at the Wasatch State Park.
